

EUROPEAN BUSINESS SCHOOL

A large, ornate Gothic building, likely a university or school building in Oxford, with multiple spires and large arched windows. The building is made of light-colored stone and has a crenellated roofline. The foreground shows a paved area and a fence.

RESIDENTIAL LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME IN OXFORD

RESIDENTIAL LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME

Background

Over the centuries, Oxford has established itself as one of the world's centre of education and continues to excel as an academic centre for excellence.

The European Business School has teamed up with the Oxford Association of Management to offer first class management development programmes for international managers. It offers the best of professional learning courses in combination with a residential week in Oxford enabling managers to develop their career. The residential leadership programme will focus on integration of business disciplines through issue-oriented learning.

Successful management of business requires not only a thorough theoretical and practical understanding of business, but also the economic and cultural differences. Excellent international communication, negotiation, leadership and team building skills are required as well. Membership of the prestigious Oxford Association of Management will also be organised.

Benefits and Investment to Participants

The residential programme encourages innovative thinking, strategic planning, critical thinking and analyses, as well as other important factors ranging from leadership to entrepreneurship. The schedule encourages discussion and networking among participants and academics. Networking will play a vital role.

The investment for this programme per participant includes residential accommodation and meals at Oxford, but excludes international airfares and ground transport expenses for overseas participants. Those planning to attend are encouraged to make their own travel arrangements, including visits to clients or prospective clients in Britain and Europe, before or after the programme.
